A correspondent of the Mercury writing from Chungking on the 25th ultimo says :- I made heate to get back here without delay, fully expecting that the Customs would be opened by the 1st of January; but though the commissioner, Mr. Hobson, and his staff have been here about two months, nothing whatever has been done. The site for either the Custom House or the concession has not even been selected, and from what I am told, it seems to be unlikely that any concession will be granted. It looks now as it nothing will be done till after Chinese New Year. Some few days ago the Commissioner the Prefect, and the Magistrate went scross the river to look at a place onited by the natives Wang-kish, which is a little below the city Uhnugking, and just opposite the city Riangpeh or Lee Miu. The place is very hilly, in fact there is no level ground anywhere in the neighbourhood. The position proposed here for the Custom House has some advantages, chief: amongst. them being the fact that it is upon the opposite side of the river from hungking, and consequently as a place of residence for Foreigners it would be much quieter than if the location were nearer that city. The mountains at the back offer many agreeable sites for residences and there is plenty of good spring water close at hand; no inconsiderable advantage, not to say luxury, in a climate where there is no ice obtainable in the summer. But as I have said, there is really nothing decided yet about the sites in question, and it will be after the New Year before I have may definite news to give you on this point.

To Mr. Suthe land the famous P. and O Various suggestions are made as to the motives | Company mainly owes its remarkable position the incendiary or incondicries; but as the Its prosperity may be judged by the fact that matter is in the hands of the police, it is better at the annual meeting last week the out turn for the year was equal to, and even better than that for the previous twelve months, which was a period of admittedly great progress The The natural speculations as towho the successor whom the shipping trade is aware, was one of of the late Seventh Prince would be in the anxiety, for the ratesfell to such an extent that at councils of the Empire have now pretty well run | the present moment the P. and O. view, we may explain, is held by well informed the whole of the management charges, from the Chinese who were quite prepared to hear of the fees of the directors down to the wages of the appointment of Prince Ching. His promotion office boys, throughout the length and breadth of will probably necessitate a change in the Tanng. the service, were only £150 more in 1890 than li Yamen. It was suggested some time ago that they were in 1883. There is no complaint of there was a change of the Viceroy Li Hung-chang chesseparing economy, and an annual sum like being brought up to Peking and put on one of the £109.854 allows a fair margin, but no extravahigh boards, but the appointment of Prince Gling, who is considered as not altogether friendly to the "Bismarck" of China hardly bars out this view. Nor, is it probable that the obdage, which would relish the obdage, which would reach the obdage. which would probably scarcely be as remaners. The expenditure at Leadenhall Street is carefully conpassing over of the Sixth Prince, Kung, is only sidered before it is sanctioned. in a greater measure than any other that was opan to him, the respect and confidence of the mercantile community. In 1866 Mr. Satherland left China, to join the, "management" in London, but before he started home, he inspected every station of the company in the East. In 1867 the fortunes of the P. and O. suffered a sharp decline. The Sues Canal was opened, and the foundations on which the monepoly of the company had vested were swent away. Upon Mr. Sutherland mainly devolved Luzon Sugar the task of reconstructing the organisation. An Miningmay be imagined, the task was not a light one. The time had arrived when neither the old lines, the old ships, nor the old system could be main tained. But though Mr. Sutherland, who joined the board in 1872, had made up his mind as to the necessities of the case, he had to encounter fierco prosition. At a crowded meeting and in his first speech as junior director, he overgame all the obstacles which were suggested, and from that date to this the progress of the company has been all that could be desired. In 1880 Mr. Sutherland was elected chairman, and in the Wang Coal Mines, and make Kelung a proper same year he married Miss Alice MacNaught, Steamship Coys.—
